A gunman has killed six people in drive-by shootings near the Californian city of Santa Barbara, US police say. The shootings took place late on Friday in Isla Vista near the University of California-Santa Barbara campus. The suspected gunman was found dead in his car with a bullet wound to the head. It is unclear whether it was self-inflicted. Police are looking into a possible link with a Youtube video (click on link below to view video) in which a young man complains of repeated rejection by women and threatens to take revenge.

The shootings occurred at several sites in the town of Isla Vista.

Police say they were alerted to the shootings around 21:30 on Friday (04:30 GMT on Saturday). Six minutes later, the suspect and responding officers exchanged gunfire. The suspect fled. But after a second exchange of fire with police, he eventually crashed into a parked vehicle. He was found dead in his car with a bullet wound to the head. A semi-automatic handgun was recovered from the vehicle. Investigators know the suspect's name but would not release it before all relatives were notified, Santa Barbara County Sheriff Bill Brown told reporters.
